[INTRODUCTION]

Thank you for agreeing to take this important survey, which is part of a national study on the quality of work and economic life in Canada. The study is being conducted by the Department of Sociology at the University of Toronto, as part of an initiative looking into the social factors that influence health. As usual, your opinions will only be analyzed along with other survey participants and no personally identifiable information will ever be shared.

Again, thank you for your opinion, which will provide important insights into the experiences of work and economic life in Canada and how these relate to well-being.

Sincerely, your Angus Reid Forum team and the University of Toronto.

[ROWS] [RANDOMIZE]

Employees where I work are often expected to take work home during nonwork hours and/or nonwork days.

I have the freedom to decide what I do on my job.

It is basically my own responsibility to decide how my job gets done.

I have a lot of say about what happens on my job.

My job requires that I keep learning new things.

My job requires that I be creative.

My job allows me to develop my skills and abilities.

I get to do a lot of different things on my job.

I am expected to do things that go beyond my job description or usual duties.

I have to do extra work because of the lack of effort or mistakes of others.

Sometimes it feels like responsibilities are downloaded from those in more senior positions.

At my place of employment, employees who put their family or personal needs ahead of their jobs are not looked on favorably.

At my place of employment, employees have to choose between advancing in their jobs or devoting attention to their family or personal lives.

There is an unwritten rule at my place of employment that you cannot take care of family needs on company time.

When I'm on vacation, I'm able to fully and completely disengage from work.

I have the schedule flexibility at work to manage my personal or family responsibilities.

I need to be available after work hours or on weekends in case a problem at work comes up.

When decisions are being made, all of the people who will be affected are asked for their ideas.

Managers make sure that all employees' concerns are heard before decisions are made.

Job decisions are applied consistently across all affected employees.

Think of this ladder as representing where people stand in our society. At the top of the ladder are the people who are the best off—those who have the most money, most education, and best jobs. At the bottom are the people who are the worst off—who have the least money, least education, and the worst jobs or no jobs.

The higher up you are on this ladder, the closer you are to the people at the very top and the lower you are, the closer you are to the people at the very bottom.
